Monday Nite Footballers Predictions

By Jim "Grand Dad" Nunnelly
Predicting Since 1970

Ollie Hubbard (5)
Kansas City by 6
Gonna try this one more time!

Can Herm get his defense to play like a playoff team against Baltimore?

Kansas City Chiefs versus Baltimore Ravens, 12 noon, KCTV 5

Dr. Charles Allen (7)
Kansas City by 3
A prayer, we've done it before!

Paul Booker (6)
Baltimore by 14
A McNair Air Assault!

Carl Clark (5)
Kansas City by 7
Without a defense, Chiefs will win!

Bubba Cleaver (7)
Kansas City by 7
The 12th player (Arrowhead crowd)!

Ike Gardner (6)
Baltimore by 10
Ravens will sport Chiefs' feathers!

Lloyd Greenfield (8)
Kansas City by 3
Chiefs owe a debt to their fans!

Jim Nunnelly (7)
Kansas City by 7
Johnson proves he is the MVP!

Ed West (9)
Baltimore by 7
Ravens will break the Law!

Erik Stafford (Guest)
Kansas City by 7
At home sweet home!

Chatter, Commentary, Conversation

Ollie and Sandra Hubbard just renovated their south Kansas City home. Living there for over 30 years, their house is usually full of visitors...from both near and far. Thus, when the Monday Niters convened there last Monday, the new digs and "roominess" greeted us at the front door. It was like a whole new house, even though there were just a few adjustments made to the family room. But, the endless, football conversation was not new at all. It was the same ol' crap....what do we do with our Chiefs? Some say it is the defense. Some say ol' Herm has messed up a good offense. Even others say that Larry Johnson cannot do it all. And most of us, still wonder why we can't lock down a playoff spot, on our own.

Of course, when the Chiefs lost to lowly Cleveland, the haters came out in full force. Even ol' Booker, who had joined up with the loyalists, has reverted to his old ways and thinks that McNair and the Baltimore Ravens will embarrass the Chiefs, even out at Arrowhead Sunday. Now, we know how Ike feels but thoughtful Ed West has moved over to the "haters" side, as well. So what are we loyalists to do? Shall we follow the facts that the Chiefs are just "iffey" and just live with that? Do we abandon the Chiefs and just cease our hopeless hoping? Should we just "bite the bullet" and trust that the other 7-5 teams will lose, giving us yet another dimming-chance to the coveted playoffs?

The answer may lie in the scriptures. The Chiefs are like the prodigal son for they have taken the Kansas City fans through so many changes, so many vicissitudes (ups and downs). In fact, it is no longer safe to say that you are a Chiefs fan. Like the prodigal son, one day they'll come back... a little raggedy but willing to start all over and become the team they are capable of being. Like the father, we may not understand how or why. We must just accept them back, when they decide to turn from their wicked ways.

Dr. Allen, Loyal Lloyd, and I think they are just inches away from "showing up and showing out" again. Yes, we have had to go through some real drama every year, of watching them play good one Sunday, only to look like clowns the next. However, in the end, the Chiefs will be looking as renewed as the Hubbards newly-renovated house. And we'll forgive and forget about all we had to go through.

And then, we'll welcome the Chiefs to the playoffs, even home-field advantage....and Larry Johnson will be crowned the MVP...and the Chiefs will beat not only Baltimore but Oakland, San Diego and Jacksonville. And the television announcers will be saying, "What about those Chiefs?"

Wait! Am I dreaming or what? Let's go back to the Hubbards and start this conversation all over.

Reproduced with permission of the copyright owner. Further reproduction prohibited without permission.