Monday Nite Footballers Predictions

By Jim "Grand Dad" Nunnelly
Predicting Since 1970

San Diego Chargers vs. Kansas City Chiefs
3:15 p.m. KCTV-5

Charles Allen (10) Chiefs by 21 I'm afraid afraid Marty's Charge is gone

Paul Booker (9) Chiefs by 14 Defense must stop the run

Carl Clark (10) Chiefs by 7 Warfield should sit this one out

Bubba Cleaver (10) Chiefs by 8 It should be a blowout; line will blow it

Ike Gardner(8) Chargers by 3 Marty fighting for job

Lloyd Greenfield (10) Chiefs by 3 Defense will rise

Ollie Hubbard (10) Chiefs by 25 Heading for the zoo

Jim Nunnelly (10) Chiefs by 17 Receivers, Trent set records

Ed West (9) Chiefs by 14 Chargers' battery dead

Conversation, Commentary and Chatter

Reminiscing, that's what the Monday Niters did over to Ed West's house, this past Monday night. To help everyone "look back", there was an author present, who was writing a book on "Monday Night Football". Overall, the reminiscing was actually fun, for it had been a long time since the guys had just sit down and looked back. Paul Booker began to nod. Of all the Monday night televised games, the Kansas City-Buffalo game, here, in 1991 was considered "the best". That October night, the Chiefs actually beat the Marv Levy-coached, Super Bowl-bound Buffalo Bills, 33-6. Then someone remembered the announcer trio, consisting of Howard Cosell, Dandy Don Meredith, and Frank Gifford. Cosell was praised for his supportive relationship with Muhummad Ali. Booker is fully asleep by now. Conversation switched to how African Americans in the corporate workplace, must be extra cautious; especially, when they express their dissatisfaction with something. Their remarks are usually over-interpreted to mean that violence is likely to follow. Then conversation switched again. When Charles Allen and Ed West host Monday Nite Football, they actually do their own cooking. Braggarts (the rest of us need all the help we can get). Then, Greenfield, a realtor, was praised for guiding our group to become NAACP Life members. By now, Booker is snoring quite loudly, sprawled out in Ed West's gadget-filled, massage chair. And as usual, the argument over how much CALL papers cost in 1940. Bubba Cleaver kindly recounts how and why he became a member of this garrulous group. Ollie Hubbard thinks he is not noticed, as he slips away. Then, the conversation again goes awry, in several different directions. Reminiscing, while it is good for the soul, can get out of hand. Then, soft-spoken Carl Clark thanks the group for its participation especially in the Kiwanis/Harvester's partnership. Too much to keep up with. Especially when there are ten men, all talking at the same time, all on different subjects. That Paul Booker has slept through the entire football game. How could he with all this noise? And the author, who came to get information for his upcoming book, put up his note pad. And, he just gave up and joined in the reminiscing. So much for the book.

Reproduced with permission of the copyright owner. Further reproduction prohibited without permission.