Monday Nite Footballers Predictions

By Jim "Grand Dad" Nunnelly

Chiefs Struggling Offense

It is apparent that the Chiefs still have problems with their offense. Gunther Cunningham says it's the offensive line. They've even tried to blame poor Bam Morris who was their only hope from last year's dismal display of professional football. The newcomers, Shehee and Cloud, are yet untested and cannot even be counted on just yet. But, everybody in town knows the problem is in the quarterback, and particularly with Elvis Grbac. When Grbac threw the first interception in the Jacksonville game last Thursday, there was a collective sigh of disbelief. That's because no one can believe that we still believe in Grbac's ability to lead this offense. Even Warren Moon may not be the answer, for he is right up there with the "Montana Medicare quarterbacks" -- too old, too slow, and resting on past performances. Why we continue to be a retirement center for "used up" quarterbacks is beyond reason. Any way, tonight the Chiefs will try to ignite their "midwest coast offense" by allowing Grbac to start the show. Look for another sigh of disbelief.

Greg Hill, The Real Deal Is In Detroit

You have to remember Greg Hill. He's the one we drafted and then sat him on the bench. He had speed and had set all kinds of rushing records in college. They said he couldn't catch coming out of the backfield. Then, the Chiefs said he stumbled and was too fast for his feet. Any way, Hill was expected to fill the unfillable shoes of Marcus Allen and he just didn't do it. Now, after a short sting with the St. Louis Rams, he is now expected to replace the irreplaceable Barry Sanders at Detroit. Let's all hope he will get a better chance with the Lions and with the right coaching and the right motivation. Hill could have the 1,000-yard season he never had here in Kansas City. Look for Hill's revenge when he comes to Arrowhead on September 26, dressed in "motor city silver and blue."

Bill Clark Doing Well

The venerable president of the Urban League, Bill Clark, is recovering well and is expected to return to duty on a limited basis soon. Clark has been ill for several weeks and is recovering at home.

Significant Potpourri

"Swinging"' Sammie Sosa is ahead in the homerun duel with Mark McGwire of St. Louis. The Cubs' outfielder has become known for his patented "skip" when he realizes that he has hit another ball out of the park. As of Wednesday morning, Sosa has hit 55 and is on pace to set another homerun record set by McGwire last year at 70. Keep on doing it, Sosa....Evander Holyfield and Lennox Lewis have set the rematch date for November 13. In their last contest, they fought to a controversial draw, quite unusual in heavyweight championship fights. It may be noted that Holyfield failed to wear his robe with the Bible verse in his last outing...The New Orleans Saints are hurting. Their number one draft choice, Rickey Williams, is still recovering. Three other potential starters are out and questionable for the season opener, September 12. Deion Sanders' toe is getting better and he is now expected to play opening day.

Thirty Years For Monday Nite Footballers

Next week, we will celebrate 30 years of predictions, football talk, and as a fan club organization. In fact, we may well be the oldest, organized fan club for the Kansas City Chiefs. More important, the same 10 guys have met each Monday night, watched football on television, and never have departed as friends. We have watched our kids grow up and become parents themselves. We have watched each other go from young Turks to mellowed middleagers. And what's more, we've all become more health and family-minded. As educators and community leaders, we assist with children and youth at all times. We are gravely concerned about the issues in public education, and will be watching the charter school development closely. As important, we want to do everything to insulate our children from the ravages of drugs, and will promote and support any organization that protects and develops our children. Thus, next week we'll reveal our predictions and opinions just like we have for the last three decades. Thanks for listening to us.
