Monday Nite Footballers Predictions

By Jim "Grand Dad" Nunnelly
Predicting Since 1970

Super Bowl XXXVIII
New England Patriots Vs. Carolina Panthers
5:20 p.m., KCTV-5

Charles Allen
New England by 14
Just the best team

Paul Booker
New England by 7
Patriots' coach is X-factor

Carl Clark
New England by 10
Offense will prevail

Bubba Cleaver
New England by 7
Neither team is explosive; Patriots more non-explosive.

Ike Gardner
New England

Lloyd Greenfield New England by 7
It will not be a blowout

Ollie Hubbard
New England by 14
Patriots are rolling

Jim Nunnelly
Carolina by 3
Surprise for everyone

Ed West
New England by 7
More solid offense, defense

Chatter, Conversation And Commentary

Alicia Keys has a song and a video out, called "You Don't Know My Name". And that's exactly what some people think about this nameless Super Bowl game, coming up Sunday afternoon. Without a doubt, this game promises to be among the most boring and least-interesting, in the entire 38-year history of the event. More people will be watching for the new commercials and Janet Jackson, rather than the game, itself. And of course, we, Kansas City fans, have a special, non-interest in this game, as well.

First, our beloved Chiefs faltered at the altar. Started out winning nine consecutive games and then, they played like the Chiefs we all know....the best mediocre team in the National Football League. Enough potshots. Actually, we all suffered a letdown, when the Indianapolis Colts kicked or behinds, out at Arrowhead, in early January. Just like they did before. And the Colts victory drained us of our remaining enthusiasm and energy. Yea, the Colts did it to us.

Speaking of Indianapolis, there is another reason why this game will be boring. Even after the Chiefs failed us again, we were hoping that just maybe an African American coach (Dungy of the Colts), would be matched up with an African American quarterback (McNabb of the Eagles). As a tribute to Martin Luther King's 75th birthday anniversary. And when both teams lost in their respective championship game, a low-ebb interest, became even less interesting. Bottom line, this game will have no meaning whatsoever, especially to us African Americans in Kansas City. So, what are we to do, then?

Well, first, take a look at what your Monday Niters have predicted. You will find that almost all the guys, are "feeling it" for New England. That's because of their long, consecutive, homefield-winning streak; and, after all, the Patriots did beat out every other, AFC rival. But, last year, Tampa Bay surprised everyone and convincingly beat Oakland in Super Bowl XXXVII. And something tells me that Carolina will surprise everyone and beat New England, in spite of the forecasts by the Las Vegas oddsmakers and the arrogant-but-accurate Monday Nite Footballers. Maybe, it won't happen, but..... it will make an otherwise dull game, a lot more interesting.

The Monday Niters will be gathering to watch the Super Bowl at the luxurous suburban home of Ed and Celeste West.

Reproduced with permission of the copyright owner. Further reproduction prohibited without permission.